HEART THRILLING GEMS.

THE SIMPLE THINGS.

Seemed that mother only cared For the simple things of life; Seemed that mother never shared In the turmoil and the strife.
Simple things were her delight, Closer to her heart, I guess; Tears would fill her eyes at sight
Of a little baby's dress.

Mother never cared for show,
She was satisfied to dwell
In her humble way, and know These she loved were doing well.
Many keepakes mother kept,
Always simple things she chose;
Many times has mother wept O'er a little pair of shoes.

Little socks that once were worn,
And a little bow of blue;
There's a little nightgown, torn,
Where a baby's foot went through.
These are all the simple things
She has treasured through the years;
And each one a memory brings
Of a baby's smiles and tears.

Only simple, simple things, Little bottles, soiled, 'tis true;
But to them she fondly clings, Seems that mothers always do.
Closest to her heart they lie, Sacred treasures none may share;
Only for a mother's eye—Clothes the baby used to wear.

Men have come and gone, and by Monuments of chiseled stone, Towering upward to the sky,
What they were on earth is known.
But a little baby leaves Only little simple things—
And to them a mother clings, Greater monuments than kings.

THERE'S NO TIME LIKE THE PRESENT.

There's no time like the present;
To-morrow's far away,
And what our hands may find to do God bids us do to-day.

Be ready in the golden Now
To do a helpful deed, And never let the chance go by
To meet a sister's need.

Don't wait until another time For she who waits may lose
The greatest chance of all her life;
It is not ours to choose.

The opportunities to do;
They come at God's behest,
And she who never seizes one Is she who lives the best.

—Eben H. Rexford

CHOICE.

I want not wife nor wealth, but I want not much of fame,
I want not that was left in me
No high and noble name;
I want not power, no, not I,
Nor pride which both its fall,
To face me brings and do not Along these lines at all.

I'll give no superficial part To gain mankind's applause
If I might be in mind and heart Exempt from nature's laws,
So that no fault could ever be found!

In my perfect way
And men the whole great world around Would name me but to praise.

PASS UNDER THE ROD.

What is life but endless sorrow?
What is love but a brief tomorrow?
What is death but sweet oblivion?

Only a little while more in the school of life;
Only a little more of all this care and strife;
Only a little while and the breath of life is gone;
Only a little while to a brighter, happier morn.

You cannot look out love,
Else you would die.
You must love something here, Though know not why.

When the lights are out,
When 'tis dark and still,
When there's no one about,
When you're all alone,
Do you never wonder, why such things must be?

To the Editor of the Citizen,

My Dear Sir—

In behalf of the Interdenominational Commission of Maine allow me to call the attention of your readers to the important service which summer visitors can render to the communities in which they spend their vacations. To the local churches along our coast and on our lakes the summer is a trying time, at best. There is much more work to be done; other standards of living are brought in; and if with this extra work and new standards of living there are also brought other religious services, the total result is to weaken rather than strengthen the religious life and work of these communities. Accordingly, the Interdenominational Commission earnestly requests our summer visitors, wherever possible, to cooperate with the churches of ready established instead of maintaining services of their own. If the summer visitors will communicate with Professor A. W. Anthony, Lewiston, Maine, Secretary of the Commission, or with the pastors of the local churches, every possible effort will be made to secure friends of the summer visitors or other acceptable ministers to occupy these pulpits for a considerable portion of the time; and, so far as possible, modifications of the church service will be made, in accordance with the preferences of the summer visitors. To this way, by cooperation with the local churches, our summer visitors can render a substantial service to the communities which they visit. The Interdenominational Commission believes that the sense of spiritual unity which will thus be developed between permanent residents and transient visitors will more than compensate for any sacrifice of preference on the part of the visitors.

Sincerely yours,
William DeWitt Hyde

FOUR AND ITS MULTIPLE OF TEN.

The number four was anciently considered the most perfect of all, being the arithmetical mean between one and seven. Omph, the second calliph, said, "Four things come not back—the spoken word, the sped arrow, the past life, the neglected opportunity." In nature there are four seasons and the four points of the compass.

Forty, a multiple of four by ten, is one of the sacred numbers. The probation of our first parents in the garden of Eden is supposed to have been forty years. The rain fell at the deluge forty days and nights, and the water remained on the earth forty days. The days of embalming the dead were forty.
Solomon's temple was forty cubits long. In it were ten layers, each four cubits long and containing forty baths.

Moses was forty years old when he led into the land of Midian, where he dwelt forty years. He was on Mount Sinai forty days and forty nights. The Israelites wandered in the wilderness forty years. The Saviour fasted forty days and nights before entering upon public life. The same time elapsed between the resurrection and the ascension.—Exchange.

How Roberts Won the Victoria Cross.

Roberts noted that a sower of the squadron with which he rode was in great danger from a seep with a fixed bayonet. The content of sword against bayonet would have ended disastrously had not Roberts intervened and disposed of the bayonet. That was barely done when he noticed in the distance two seeps facing with a standard. He galloped after the rebels and overtook them, and then he had a close fight for the possession of the standard. He cut down its chief bearer. While wrenching the staff from the man's grasp with both his hands the other seep turned his musket on him and fired. The musket was within a few inches of Roberts' person, and there would certainly have been an end of him had not the musket refused to go off. As it was, he rode away unhurt with the standard, and for those two courageous and gallant acts in close succession Roberts got the Victoria cross.—Cobden's "Life of Roberts."

The Cows of Muscat.

Muscat is famed as the hub of the amalgams in the Persian gulf, the nearby desert tribes being regularly supplied with arms despite the efforts of the British patrol. But to the writer, reared on a Missouri farm, the odd antics of the cows of Muscat seemed nothing short of freakish. They actually eat fish. No grass grows, so the wily Arab teaches his family cow to subsist on dates and dried fish. The milk tastes queer to a foreigner, which is probably why the Arab likes it. He also claims it is richer and makes more butter, but most ridiculous of all is the discipline practiced on cows when the calves are "weaned." A calfkin or sometimes a goat skin is stuffed with rags and tied not far from where the mother cow is anchored. This eddy of her late lamented offspring soothes her nerves and keeps her from "going dry," according to Arab tradition.—San Francisco Chronicle.

A Surprised Lion.

The man against lions did not always get their own way. Five Sikh captains made a daring night raid on and on this they fixed their sleeping tent. Each night they ascended by means of a ladder, which they drew up after them. They were warned that it was not high enough, but were content to believe that God was all-powerful. One night they left the edge of the ladder projecting beyond the end of the starting. A hungry man eater on the prowl observed this and, thinking he could not find a meal more conveniently elsewhere, determined to try how a carpenter tasted.
Calculating his spring, he leaped lightly on to the projecting ladder, which, unfortunately for him, instantly tipped up and toppled over, both falling heavily to the ground. The lion roared, so did all the men, making for the nearest trees. From "In the Grip of the Nylka," by Richard J. P. Patterson.

A Test of Friendship.

A gentleman asked the following peculiar way of proving the true friendship of a person. He gave to twenty five intimate friends a string for a team of a good steed. The two dozen friends did not reply at all. One decided to lead the string, two from next to him to do the next day and did not do it. One went the next day and did not do it. One went the next day and did not do it. The gentleman and all the friends had written to him well off.—London Mail.

LYDIA W. BARKER, May 16th, 1911.

Know the Wrong Man.

It was with a good deal of confidence that he walked up to the magistrate's desk in a Philadelphia station notwithstanding the fact that a policeman had a firm hold on both sleeves. He waited quietly till one of the policemen made the accusation of "drunk and disorderly" and then asked the magistrate if he might speak.

"Yes," replied the magistrate. "What have you to say?"

"Well, judge, I was drunk last night, but it does not often happen. I have lived in this ward nearly all my life, and any one can tell you that."

"Oh, lived here all your life, have you? Do you know any one in the ward that can speak for you?" asked the magistrate.

"Yes," said the prisoner. "I know him. He can tell you all about me."

"You know him, do you? Well, so do I. Ten days," was the result.

Justification.

The old dandy had driven his fare to the hotel and was now demanding a dollar for his service.

"What?" protested the passenger. "A dollar for that distance? Why, is it half a mile as the crow flies?"

"That's true, bona," returned the dandy, with an appealing smile. "But, you see, sah, dat old crow he ain't got feet, wiv' an' ten children to support, not to mention de keep for de house."—Harpur's Weekly.

He Had.

The kind hearted man had given the panhandler a nickel.

"Haven't you got anything smaller?" asked the panhandler.

"Well, here's a dime; that's smaller," answered the good natured man, still playing the coin for a moment and walking away.—Buffalo Enquirer.
